

Bio

Jill K Willis is the author of The Demons Among Us, a young adult Christian speculative novel. It's about two siblings who must overcome their inner demons to fight the very real ones that are holding their friends hostage.

Jill grew up in Atlanta and, after graduating from the University of Georgia, worked for a newspaper, a magazine publisher, and a large telecommunications company. When she became pregnant with her second child, she decided to start a public relations firm, which she ran from her basement until that child graduated high school. Then she turned to fiction.

She's a founding member of the Storyteller Squad, a blog for teens who love to read and write. In 2020, she won two writing awards for The Demons Among Us: The American Christian Fiction Writers Genesis Contest-YA Category and the ACFW South Carolina Chapter's First Page Novel Contest.

As a mom of two grown children and three godchildren, and as a senior-high Sunday school teacher, she knows the struggles teens encounter. She wants to point them to the love of God and the truth of His Word.

She volunteers at the Atlanta Airport's USO, plays handbells at her church, and as a former Junior League president, continues to assist her local chapter with special projects.

Jill lives on a lake north of Atlanta with her husband and a one-eyed cat. She's currently working on the sequel to The Demons Among Us. Her children proof her chapters when they're bored.
